Natura Morta

Frantz Loriot - viola
Sean Ali - contrabass
Carlo Costa - drums

web: naturamorta.info

Contacts:
frantzloriot@gmail.com
seanchristopherali@gmail.com
carlowpcosta@gmail.com

Decay is Natura Morta’s second studio album. It was released on the British label FMR Records in December 1st, 2013. The album was recorded in Brooklyn, NY a few days after a 10 day tour in the Northeast and Midwest of the US in the Spring of 2012.

www.fmr-records.com

Since its inception in the summer of 2011, the trio Natura Morta has been dedicated to exploring musical structures and relationships through all-acoustic improvisation. Through rehearsals and performances, the trio has developed a very personal musical language with which it creates instant musical forms. The architecture or design of each improvisation is carefully constructed in real time in an attempt to create a balance between stillness and motion, silence and saturation, tension and release, purity and elaboration, anticipation and surprise, continuity and interruption, etc. Focusing on these basic principals, Natura Morta draws listeners into a sound world where a musical landscape slowly unfolds in time.

The members of Natura Morta are invested in researching the sonic possibilities of each of their respective instruments and make use of these to create a distinctive collective pallet of sound. Each musician uses extended techniques, preparations and a variety of objects to broaden the sonic possibilities of each instrument within the realm of acoustic music. It is important for the trio to keep all sound sources acoustic in order to retain a strong physical relationship with all sounds produced.

Natura Morta released its debut recording, the Natura Morta EP, in March 2012 on the Brooklyn-based record label Prom Night Records. The band performed several concerts in New York City and toured the East Coast/Midwest of the US twice that year. In October 2012 Natura Morta released a live recording on a split tape with guitarist Nick Millevoi on the Philadelphia-based label Edible Onion. In December 2013 the trio released Decay, its second studio recording on the British label FMR Records.
Bassist, composer, and improviser Sean Ali from Dayton, Ohio has been living in New York City since 2003. There he participates in the city’s vibrant experimental music scene both as a performer and curator. Aside from Natura Morta, his current projects include: Fester with David Grollman (snare drum), Hag with Brad Henkel (trumpet) and Denman Maroney (piano) and treffpunkt with Mikko Innenen (saxophones), Cédric Piromâli (piano) and Christian Weber (double bass). He is a member of Joachim Badenhorst Carate Urio Orchestra and Pascal Niggenkemper Vision 7. He is currently working on his “Notebook Large Ensemble”, a ten piece ensemble. In addition to his own projects he has also worked alongside many musicians such as Joëlle Léandre, David S. Ware, Anthony Braxton & Walter Thompson Orchestra, Barre Phillips, and many others. After living in Paris and New York City, FL recently relocated in Zürich (CH). www.frantzloriot.com

Bassist, composer, and improviser Sean Ali from Dayton, Ohio has been living in New York City since 2003. There he participates in the city’s vibrant experimental music scene both as a performer and curator. Aside from Natura Morta, his current projects include: Fester with David Grollman (snare drum), Hag with Brad Henkel (trumpet) and Denman Maroney (piano) and treffpunkt with Mikko Innenen (saxophones), Cédric Piromâli (piano) and Christian Weber (double bass). He is a member of Joachim Badenhorst Carate Urio Orchestra and Pascal Niggenkemper Vision 7. He is currently working on his “Notebook Large Ensemble”, a ten piece ensemble. In addition to his own projects he has also worked alongside many musicians such as Joëlle Léandre, David S. Ware, Anthony Braxton & Walter Thompson Orchestra, Barre Phillips, and many others. After living in Paris and New York City, FL recently relocated in Zürich (CH). www.frantzloriot.com

Drummer Carlo Costa, was born and grew up in Rome, Italy. Since 2005 he has been living in New York City where he takes part in the city’s improvised music scene as a leader or co-leader of various projects as well as a sideman. Besides Natura Morta he currently leads or co-leads Minerva (w/ bassist Pascal Niggenkemper and pianist JP Schlegelmilch), the Carlo Costa Quartet (w/ saxophonist Jonathan Moritz, trombonist Steve Swell and bassist Sean Ali), a trio with trumpeter Joe Moffett and tubist Dan Peck, a duo with guitarist Ryan Ferreira, the large ensemble Acustica and a solo drums project. Carlo is also currently a member of Kenny Warren’s Laila and Smitty (w/ Jeremiah Lockwood, Myk Freedman and Josh Myers) and Jean-Brice Godet’s Mujó Quartet (w/ Pascal Niggenkemper and Michaël Attias). www.carlocostamusic.com
Press

Natura Morta EP Review on Free Jazz Blog, Stef Gjissels (9/20/12)

"... new elements and suddenly emerging sounds (...) are a source of menace, adding an increase of tension, not actually assaulting the listener - the volume is too low for that - but adding a layer of danger - undefined like creaking floorboards - creating an anticipation of the inevitable doom. The album is short, some thirty minutes only, but really worth looking for. (*)"

Natura Morta EP Review on Point of Departure’s, Bian Morton(9/4/12)

"this unusually convened trio (...) offers blood and sinew as well as moments of dewy loveliness. (...) As the title promises, form and “composition” are central here..."

Natura Morta EP Review by Ken Waxman on New York City Jazz Record’s July 2012 Issue, and on Jazz Word (7/6/12)

"Using only acoustic instruments, the members of Natura Morta replicate the harsh textures of musique concrète with juddering crunches, abrasive squeaks and vibrating pops. Eschewing amplification, the Brooklyn-based trio of violist Frantz Loriot, bassist Sean Ali and drummer Carlo Costa operate in a dense landscape where extended techniques and instantaneous timbral actions reconfigure their instrument’s conventional timbres into sometimes unidentifiable pieces of a jagged sound picture. (...) Daring and inventive on their debut, the members of Natura Morta are sure to be heard - and heard of - again in this or other configurations.”

Natura Morta EP review on Lucid Culture, Alan Young (6/22/12)

"(...) In its own extremely well-conceived, twisted and defiantly perverse way, it’s a tremendously compelling listen..."

Natura Morta EP Review on Monsieur Délire, François Couture (5/30/12)

"(...) Delicate arco on strings, sound events that may seem unrelated, but slowly weave their own shared meaning in the course of each track. Artistically successful.”

EP Review on Dustin Carlson’s Blog (5/28/12)

"Enter the aural space of Natura Morta and be overtaken by delicately crafted realms of disturbing sonic experience. (...) Soothing, industrial soundscapes are created by the musicians’ use of drones, bells, and gently bowed strings. (...) It is impossible to parcel out the sounds each musician is making in these live recordings. Franz Loriot’s viola flitters and squeals into the sonic territory inhabited by Sean Ali’s howling bass. Bells ring, surfaces grumble - occasionally a low thud clues us in: we are hearing Carlo Costa’s approach to playing the drums. (...) mysterious, dark and intriguing.”
Natura Morta

Decay

1. Sirens 7:10
2. Missera 11:47
3. The Burial of Memories 18:08
4. As the Dawn Fades 6:10

Total Time: 43:45

Franz Lorik - viola, objects
Sean All - continuous objects
Carlo Costa - drums, percussion

Natura Morta

Nothing beside remaineth. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The tune and level sands stretch far away.

Percy Bysshe Shelley, "Ozymandias"

www.naturamorta.info